Dear New Paltz student,

Welcome, new international undergraduates! It has been such a pleasure working with all of you! I feel like I already know some of you, and I want to wish you all well on your first days of school. While I am sad that I cannot greet you in person, I find myself often thinking of our international students and how much more difficult it must be for you. Some of you have been unable to do so and are taking their first steps toward a better way of life. As I write these words, many of you are alone, far from home, and anxious about the future. I want to wish you all well and let us know! We are here to support you.

Professional development is essential to your success at New Paltz. If you are taking classes from your home country or are a continuing student, you are taking classes from your home country. You may be wondering how to make the most of your time here. The Center for International Programs can help you with this. They can offer you advice on how to study, work, and live in the United States. They can also help you with the things you need to know about living in the United States, such as housing, transportation, and healthcare.

We have a lot of information about the United States to offer. We can help you with a variety of things, such as finding housing, getting a job, and learning about the American culture. We can also help you with the things you need to know about living in the United States, such as housing, transportation, and healthcare.

We are here to support you. Please don't hesitate to contact us if you have any questions or concerns. We are here to help you.

Best regards,
